PERSONAL AND SOCIETY.

There have been several events during the past week that bave been of interest in the social world. Among them were the reception of Miss Nicholson, the concert Wednesday night with Mrs. Seguin-Wallace, Miss Margaret Reid, Miss Luella Hughes, Miss Mary Leathers, Mrs. Anna Walker, Miss Sadie Walker, Professor Ernestinoff and Mr. Meck; the Kirmess Tuesday night for the Free Kindergarten and the entertainments for the Kirmess dancers by Mrs. Comly, Miss Garrard and and Mrs. Geo. M. Catterson. There were also Mrs. Spades's tea for Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Griffiths; Mrs. Geo. W. Combs's "lemon" party, the first ever given here; the receptions of Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Woodburn and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Griffiths; the company of Miss Jones for her friend Miss Gardiner. and the children's party for Fred and Hallie

A large proportion of funds used for the support of private charities or those societies whose service is for the poor, is raised by means of amateur entertainments. The concert or musical and literary is most generally the form of the entertainment. and the best talent of the city or village in which it occurs is invited to assist, with a greater or less degree of success. As a rule, musicians and readers freely give their services for the cause of charity. People are generous in their purchase of tickets, and dozens of calls are made upon merchants every week by ticket-sellers. Not to be thought ill-tempered or ungenerous, the merchant buys tickets and if he does not use them for his family gives them to some one whom he thinks gives them to some one whom he thinks would like to go. Amateur concerts are not beld in the highest repute, and many a person would have to be paid to go. Notwithstanding all this many will and do go. One great reason why they are not popular is that punctuality is not one of the virtues observed. An evening performance should begin at the customary hour, so'clock, and most people are seated by that time, and what do they do? Simply sit and talk till 8:30 o'clock, waiting for the first number. By that time one third of the concert should be through. Then, between numbers, the audience is compelled to wait several minutes, sometimes as many as fifteen. sit and talk till 8:30 o'clock, waiting for the first number. By that time one third of the concert should be through. Then, between numbers, the audience is compelled to wait several minutes, sometimes as many as lifteen. Some performers have an idea that they Some performers have an idea that they make a more marked impression by not coming on soon. If those who take part would be on time and preserve a reasonable regularity between numbers one of the greatest drawbacks would be entirely done away with. If there is to be any time left free there should be an intermission when persons can leave their seats to visit friends or promenade, but the time should not be consumed before and during the performance by those taking part. Both the quality and the quantity of exercises provided for the audience are enjoyable. It takes a more cultivated person to satisfy the public than formerly, for education in every line is so advanced that the bang and dash of "Silvery Waves," as it used to be played, is not the style for the modern audience. There is nothing that detracts more from the pleasure of the audience than to be kept waiting, and when the amateur performance begins on time those who have it in charge may look forward to a larger audience. Then it will not be considered a bore, as it is frequently now.

cles, who has a billiard-room in the house, was one evening teaching a young lady, in whom he was somewhat interested, to play. The small boy of the family went up to view the game, but was evidently not greatly pleased at its progress, and soon came down. Some one of the family asked him how the game was going on, and he said: "The game is not going on at all. Uncle—— is not playing at all; he is just standing there holding Miss——'s hand. That's all he's doing, and I don't think there's any fun in that sort of a game."

The last meeting of the Woman's Club was duties in the club, which is quite a complimentary state when there are seventy-five members considered. Mrs. Henry Jameson made a report of her visit as a delegate to the Woman's Club at Frankfort, and Miss Margaretta Elder reported her visit to Lafayette in the same capacity. The only other visit to another club was made by Mrs. James M. Winters, to the Sorosis of New York, which she reported immediately upon her return. Mrs. J. R. McKee, who was present, tendered the thanks of her mother, Mrs.
Harrison, and herself to the club for the reception and banquet which was given them by the club just before their departure for Washingion. The subjects for the afternoon were various societies. The "Red Cross" was considered in a paper by Miss Anna Hendricks; the "White Cross," by Mrs. H. G. Carey; "The King's Daughters," by Mrs. H. N. Goe, and the W. C. T.
U. was the subject of conversation, led by Mrs.

The most brilliant and elegant society reception of the season was given last Friday evening by Mrs. C. T. Doxey. in honor of Miss Arethusa Murphy and Miss Mamie Gillette, of Chicago. In comparison with it no society event of its character has occurred in this city for years. The Doxey Muste Hall was thrown open for dancing from 8 until 11, at which time the party repaired to the elegant Doxey mansion, on North Main street. Up to this twenty lovely young couples indulged in the terpsichorean art, under the inspiring strains of Pander's orchestra, until supper was announced at 11. The beautiful grounds of the Doxey home were illuminated by fairy lamps of various colors, and from the trees and shrubbery depended numerous particular colored lanterns, reminding one of old-time fairy days. While refreshments were being served on the front veranda, the superflor music which floated from the pariors caused the delighted guests to imagine that heaven was very near. Among those present were Misses Edith McCullough, Gertrade Schlater, Corinne Undernill, Laura Sandsberry, Hattle Makepeace, Ida Black, Jessie Mitchell, Birdie Clark, Margie Clark, Ella Pence, Lena Smith, Arethusa Murphy, Mamie Gillette, Kathie Harwood, Hinda Peirce, Lizzie Schlater, Messrs.
